Building Rating

90% of readers like the Music Hall (Cincinnati).

What do you think?

The original building was a more modest festival hall; the current Music Hall is home to the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and the Cincinnati Opera. It was also the site of the 1880 Democratic Convention, and is currently a National Historic Landmark. The peak of the gable is 150 feet high

- It is said that Music Hall was built on top of a potter's field. A number of strange incidents have been reported here.
- A janitor says he once heard the voices of many angry people whispering at him.
- The voice of a woman singing was once heard when the building was supposed to be empty.
- Several workers once followed the sound of laughter and found spirits dressed in period clothing dancing.
