Reformatory Ghost?

From the Creepy Cleveland Archives

Contributed by Dugan

I took this pic touring the reformatory on my own when it was pitch back in August [2002]. The figure of the head in the background doesn't show up in any other pics so it's a bit weird. I can't explain why the head figure is so high in the air unless this individual hung himself in his past life.

Cleveland Top 10 Creepiest Legends?

I was interviewed by John and the gang at Type 3 TV last night. In honor of Halloween, I hosted a poll on the site and presented the results of the top 10 creepiest legends in northern Ohio.

While there was initially some technical difficulties, the interview lasted about 90 minutes and covered the following legends:

- Gray's Armory
- South Bay Bessie
- Squire's Castle
- Rider's Inn
- Witch's Ball
- Helltown
- Gore Orphanage
- Mansfield State Reformatory
- Franklin Castle
- Melonheads

You can stream the entire show at the Type 3 TV website (it's in two parts, owing to the aforementioned technical difficulties), or you can grab my mp3 copy from here (Note: it's a 20.3M file) I want to thank John and the guys from Type 3 TV for having me on (again) and look forward to working with them in the future on some (possible) on-location haunts. Stay tuned, kids.

Rachelle and the Guard

Rachelle and the Guard, originally uploaded by Creepy Cleveland.
from: Lori

This photo was taken at Mansfield Reformatory a week ago...friday the 27th. We felt a very rapid temperature drop and a very distinct presence moving past us (in solitary)...I snapped this photo....other than cropping the top off the pic its untouched.

Creepy Picture Submission

from: Penny Sandborn

Hi, my family and I visited the Mansfield Reformatory on Sunday, August 27th. I think this is an orb above the light fixture?? Or is it just dust?

Let me know what you think

Penny
